9. Active management

The fund relies on the investment team of Al Rajhi Capital and external advisors to conduct a periodic assessment of the sectors in the real estate investment market. The fund's assets will be managed by a team in real estate investments. The team will continuously anticipate patterns and cycles in the real estate investment market, in addition to market fundamentals and sector characteristics, to take advantage of the opportunities available in the real estate market and maintain the fund's long-term objectives. In addition, Al Rajhi Capital or its subsidiaries may act as property manager for some leased properties.

10. The investment decision-making process

In the pursuit of new opportunities in the real estate market, the Fund Manager will adopt an active investment approach in order to identify opportunities and effectively execute deals in line with the investment policy followed by the investment team of the Fund Manager.

As part of the process of selecting the right real estate when buying or selling, the Fund Manager studies each real estate separately before comparing it to the real estate sector in general. The Fund Manager takes several factors into consideration, including the attractiveness of the real estate location, competitive advantages, levels of demand and cash liquidity in the real estate market, vacancy rates and other factors to reach a recommendation to the fund's board of directors to make a decision on each asset, and then the Fund Manager implements the decision and arranges all procedures required with third parties, whether they are providers of services to the fund, such as legal advisors and others, or the concerned government agencies. It may also rely on third-party advisors regarding technical and financial evaluation and legal services.

11. Exit from investments

The main objective of the fund is to provide investors with current income, which would require maintaining ownership of assets for a certain period of time. The Fund Manager will continuously monitor the market for opportunities to exit from one or more of its investments. Justifications for the exit include but are not limited to: (a) rebalancing the portfolio to include new assets commensurate with the fund's objectives, (b) deterioration in the fundamentals of the real estate asset or (c) negative expectations and outlook on the real estate market and sub-sectors that may affect the assets of the fund.

The fund intends to generally hold the investments for the long term. Note that the Fund Manager will evaluate each property owned by the fund every six months during June and December and propose specific strategies, including decisions to sell the real estate in the long and short term, if these decisions are found to be in the interest of the fund and unit owners.

The Fund Manager will obtain an evaluation of any real estate proposed to be sold by the fund from two independent evaluators approved by the Saudi Authority for Accredited Valuers.

12. Ownership structure

The Fund Manager appointed a custodian to retain ownership of the fund's assets. Subject to the conditions of any financial facilities obtained by the fund, the ownership of the assets is registered in the name of a Special Purpose entity established by the custodian for the purpose of separating the ownership of the assets owned by the fund and those owned by the custodian.

The fund may obtain financing from one or more financial institutions. In this case, the assets of the fund may be mortgaged for the benefit of the financier according to the terms and conditions of the financing documents, in accordance with the relevant regulations, instructions and circulars, provided that the ownership of the fund's assets is in the interest of the unitholders.

At the present time, Al-Rajhi Development Company, a limited liability company wholly owned by Al-Rajhi Bank, holds the assets of the mortgaged fund against the financing obtained by Al-Rajhi Real Estate Income Fund, as a guarantee for the facilities referred to above. Upon the termination of the loan and payment of the financing amount, the mortgage shall be released and the sukuk authenticated in the name of the Special Purpose Vehicle that will be established by the fund custodian to own the fund's properties for the benefit of the fund's unit owners.

In addition to the above, it is noteworthy that the Gulf Fund for Real Estate Development and Investment, a special-purpose company established by KASB Capital in its capacity as custodian, maintains Al-Andalus Center property that belongs to the Al-Rajhi Gulf Real Estate Fund. As mentioned earlier, the mortgaged assets have been returned to the Second Distinguished Warehouse Company on behalf of the Fund, which is a Special Purpose entity (a limited liability) affiliated to the custodian, established for the purpose of owning, preserving, registering and investing real estate on behalf of the fund.

13. Compliance with regulations

The Fund Manager is bound at all times by the rules and regulations governing real estate ownership in the Kingdom, including the system for non-Saudis' ownership and investment of property.

The Fund Manager has the right to refuse the participation of any investor in the fund if that investment conflicts with these terms and conditions, the real estate investment funds regulations or the instructions for traded real estate investment funds, or any other regulations approved from time to time by the Capital Market Authority or the other concerned organizing bodies involved.

1. Risk factors associated with the fund.

Distribution risks from non-operating activities: In the event that the Fund Manager is unable to pay periodic rental returns to the shareholders from the operational activity of the fund, he may distribute part of the cash available in the fund if the distributions are due to the unit owners, as a commitment to the fund, which may negatively affect the fund's returns and distributions.

Risks of Competitive Supply: There will be many other properties located in the same areas as fund portfolio properties that will compete with fund portfolio properties in attracting tenants. The number of these competing properties will have an impact on the Fund's ability to lease its properties and the sums that it can collect as rents for these properties, which may lead to a decrease in the Fund's cash flows. The performance of the fund may be adversely affected in the event that new properties are built, or existing properties are improved and developed in the same locations as the fund's properties, which may force the fund to make capital improvements or developments on the properties it owns to maintain or create a competitive advantage, and thus, this will affect the periodic distributions carried out by the fund, which in turn may negatively affect the fund's returns and distributions.

No guarantee of investment returns: There is no guarantee that the fund will be able to achieve returns for its investors or that the returns will be proportional to the risks of investing in the fund and the nature of the transactions described in these terms and conditions. It is possible that the value of the units will decrease or investors may lose some or all of their invested capital. There can be no guarantee that the expected or targeted returns to the fund will be realized. All figures and statistics mentioned and shown in these terms and conditions are for illustrative purposes only and do not represent profit expectations. Actual returns cannot be expected, which may differ from the statistics contained in these terms and conditions.

Risks of non-existence of guarantees of tenants' fulfillment of lease payments: The lease contracts related to most of the properties subject to the fund's investment do not include any guarantees of payment for rents, which may affect the fund adversely if the tenants fail to fulfill their contractual leasing obligations. Thus, the fund's cash flows and the fund's ability to make distributions to unitholders will be negatively affected if tenants fail to fulfill their rental obligations in the absence of rental guarantees.

Risks of non-conformity of conditions: The fund may lose one of the qualifying conditions for real estate investment traded funds under the Regulations for real estate investment traded funds, which would have negative effects on the fund and on the basis on which it relies in achieving returns for unitholders. Requirements to maintain the fund's status as a traded real estate investment fund have not been tested, and the Regulations for traded real estate investment funds are newly issued and have no previous explanations. In addition, subsequent changes (including a change in interpretation) may be made to the requirements to maintain the fund's status as a real estate investment traded fund. Prospective investors should note that there is no guarantee that the fund will maintain its capacity as a Traded real estate fund for an unlimited period (whether due to non-compliance with regulatory requirements or otherwise). In the event that the fund fails to fulfill any of the regulatory requirements necessary to maintain its status, the Capital Market Authority may suspend trading of units or cancel the listing of the fund. Consequently, this could negatively affect the units' marketability, liquidity and value.

Market Liquidity Risks: The fund intends to apply for the units to be accepted for trading in the Saudi Stock Exchange (Tadawul). The acceptance of this request should not be seen as a guarantee or an indication that there will be a highly liquid market for units or that it will develop. In the event that a highly liquid market does not emerge, unit trading prices may be adversely affected. In addition, in the event that such a market does not develop, relatively small transactions or prescribed dealings on units may have a significant negative impact on the unit price, and it may be difficult to carry out transactions related to a large number of units at a fixed price.

Risks of price changes: There are many factors that may negatively affect the market price of units, including general movement in the local and international stock markets, real estate markets, prevailing and expected economic conditions, interest rates, financing costs, investor trends, and general economic conditions. The ETF market may be exposed to fluctuations, and the lack of liquidity may have a negative impact on the market value of units. Therefore, participation in the fund is suitable only for investors who can bear the risks associated with these investments.

Risks of trading at a price lower than the IPO price: Units may trade at a lower price than the offered value, and unitholders may not be able to fully recover the value of their investment. The units may be traded at a lower price than their value for several reasons, including unfavorable market conditions, poor investor expectations about the feasibility of the strategy and investment policy of the fund and the increase in unit supply levels.

Distributions Volatility Risks: There are no guarantees regarding the amounts of future distributions that the fund will pay to the unitholders, it is possible that the fund will not be able to pay any dividends due to unforeseen events that result in an increase in costs (including, for example, capital expenditures in the case of carrying out renovation works in the assets of the companies in which the fund invests), or a decrease in revenue. (As in the case of non-collection of profits). Although the fund must distribute 90% of the fund's net profits annually, the fund may not be able to pay dividends to unitholders to avoid exposing the fund to certain obligations that may exacerbate the impact on its financial performance. Financial. Fund financiers may also prevent it from paying dividends to unit holders under the restricted conditions stipulated in financing agreements or otherwise, and they may, in certain circumstances (for example, after failure to fulfill any financing arrangements) have the right to get hold of Fund cash flows and use those cash flows to repay principal amounts due under the financing arrangements. Any stopping in the payment of dividends to unitholders or any decrease in their value could lead to a decrease in the market value of the units traded on the Saudi Stock Exchange (Tadawul).

Risks of increasing sales of units: Subsequent sales by unitholders of a large number of units may reduce the unit market price significant. Any offer or sale of a large number of units in the secondary market may negatively and significantly affect the market price of the units.

Risks of fundamental value reversal: The quoted market price of the units may not reflect the value of the fund's underlying investments. The money markets may be exposed to large fluctuations in prices and the volume of transactions from time to time, and this matter, in addition to economic, political and other conditions, leads to a negative and significant impact on the market price of units. As a public traded fund, the price of a single unit may be affected by a number of factors, many of which are outside the Fund Manager's control.

Risks of barriers in obtaining financing for future acquisitions: Distribution requirements and financing restrictions under the directives of REITs may limit the fund's flexibility and ability to grow through acquisitions. The fund intends to distribute at least 90% of its net profits to unitholders, which will reduce the cash available in the fund. In addition, in order to maintain the fund's status as a traded real estate investment fund, the financing ratios of the fund must not exceed 50% of the fund's total assets value, according to the latest audited financial statements. As a result, the fund has limited ability to improve its holdings or grow through additional acquisitions. In the event that the fund decides to increase the total value of its assets, it may resort to issuing priority rights in accordance with the regulations of the Capital Market Authority and the applicable Companies Law, and in this regard, it is indicated that increasing the total assets value of a traded real estate investment fund may take a long period of time due to the absence of similar prior experiences to benchmark against.

Sharia restrictions: The fund's investments must be made in accordance with the principles of Islamic Sharia as determined by the Sharia Board. These principles apply to the investment structure, the fund's activities and the diversity of its investments. In order to adhere to these principles, the fund may be forced to abandon the investment or part of it, or part of its income if the investment or investment structure is in violation of the standards of the Sharia Committee of the Fund. In addition, when adhering to the standard of the Sharia committee, the Fund may lose investment opportunities if the Sharia committee decides the existence of any proposed investment that is not complying with the provisions of Islamic Sharia and therefore the Fund cannot invest in it.

Changes in market conditions: The future performance of the Fund depends largely on changes in the levels of supply and demand in the real estate sector, which may be affected by regional and local economic and political conditions, increased competition that may result in a decrease in the value of real estate, the possibility of limited availability of mortgage funds or an increase in mortgage rates, and changes in supply levels and demand.

Non-participation in management: With the exception of what is mentioned in these terms and conditions, investors have no right or authority to participate in managing the fund or influence any of the fund's investment decisions. All management responsibilities are assigned to the Fund Manager.

Reliance on senior employees: The success of the fund's development depends mainly on the success of its management team. The loss of the services of any member of the fund management team in general (whether due to resignation or otherwise) or the inability to attract and appoint additional employees may affect the work of the fund and its system.

2. Risk factors related to the fund's assets.

Tenants in the specialized sectors: The fund invests in real estate operated and managed by other companies in the education and health care sectors. The activity of companies in the targeted sectors and their success depends on the number of specialists and professionals, their efforts, capabilities and experience. In addition, the operators operating in the targeted sectors are subject to licensing conditions and periodic reviews by the regulators. In the event that none of the licensing conditions are met, the official and regulatory authorities may suspend or cancel licenses or impose other restrictions on the operators. In addition, licensing requirements include compliance with many requirements, which increases the likelihood of exposure to compliance risks, and it is also not possible to predict what new licensing terms will be imposed in the future. To maintain their approvals and permits, operators must meet standards related to, among other things, performance, governance, institutional integrity, quality levels, personnel, management capacity, resources, and financial stability. Any negative effect on the operators' activity may limit their ability to fulfill their obligations towards the fund as the owner of many of the properties they occupy.

Ability to enroll new students and re-enroll existing students: Increasing student enrollment rates in the educational facility sector is critical to the financial performance of educational facilities. In the event of low levels of student registration or the inability to attract new students in the place of departing students, the financial performance of the educational facility may be affected by this matter, and thus will negatively affect the work, financial situation, results of operations, or the expectations of tenants working in the education sector and their obligations towards the fund.

Risks of changes in health care sector systems: The health care sector is subject to a number of laws, rules and regulations, including written and unwritten policies and regulations applied by the Ministry of Health, the Saudi Food and Drug General Authority and the like. These regulations are subject to change on a continuous basis, and the Fund does not have the ability to anticipate the amendments and developments that these laws and regulations may be subject to. The operators working in the target sectors are subject to many licensing requirements and periodic reviews by the licensing authorities. In the event that none of the license conditions are met, the competent authorities may suspend or cancel the licenses or impose restrictions and fines on the operators. Moreover, licensing requirements are usually complex, which leads to compliance risks and unpredictability of new licensing terms that may be applied or the potential impact of new license terms on operators. In order to maintain their approvals and permits, operators must meet various standards, including those related to performance standards, governance, institutional integrity, quality, employment, administrative capabilities, resources, and financial stability.

Risks of economic and seasonal variables: Health care operators may be affected from time to time by the general economic environment, as people seek to receive less medical treatment less in environments experiencing difficult economic conditions, especially for medical operations and procedures that are not covered by insurance. The inability of the real estate operating companies of the Fund to effectively mitigate these challenges could have a negative and significant effect on their business, financial position, expectations and results of their operations.

Risks of serious infectious diseases: Medical care providers deal with patients suffering from various infectious diseases. It is possible for healthy people to become infected with serious infectious diseases during their stay or visit to health care facilities. This could lead to compensation claims against operators, and as a result of reporting and press coverage, reputational damage could occur. In addition, these infectious diseases may affect the employees working for health care providers and thus reduce the ability to provide treatment and care significantly in the short, medium and long term. In addition to claims for compensation, any of these events could directly lead to restrictions on activities as a result of quarantines, the occasional closure of parts of hospitals for sterilization, and regulatory restrictions on, or withdrawing from permits and licenses. It may also indirectly lead to a decrease in capacity utilization rates due to loss of reputation. Any of these factors may have a material negative impact on the fund regarding their business, financial position, expectations and results of their operations.

availability of suitable investments: Investors will not have the opportunity to evaluate the economic, financial and other information related to the future investment opportunities of the fund. There can be no guarantee that the Fund Manager will be able to find future investments in line with the fund's investment objectives if the need arises, particularly in the current market environment. Determining and structuring the appropriate investments for the fund is competitive and highly unsecured. The Fund Manager 's inability to identify suitable investments may negatively affect the fund's ability to achieve the desired returns.

Default risks of counterparty and credit risks: The fund may be exposed to credit risks related to third parties with whom the fund does business, including the risk of default. In addition, the fund may be exposed, in certain circumstances, to the risk of default by third parties, including landowners, real estate managers, lending banks and / or contractors. The failure of others to pay any contractual dues to the fund may lead to a decrease in the income of the fund and thus ultimately affect the returns of the unitholders.

Future investment risks: As specified in these terms and conditions, and with the exception of the current investments of the fund, the Fund Manager has not specified future investments to be made after the listing date. Investors in the fund will not have any opportunity to evaluate economic, financial and other relevant information related to investments.

General real estate risks: Investments will be subject to risks related to real estate ownership, leasing, development of their operations and / or redevelopment. These risks include, but are not limited to, those risks related to the general local economic climate, local real estate conditions, changes in the levels of supply and demand related to competing real estate in the region (as a result of excessive construction, for example), shortages in energy supplies, various uninsured risks or Uninsurable, natural disasters, government regulations and decisions (for example, rent control), changes in real estate taxes, changes in rates of return, availability of mortgage financing that may make selling or refinancing real estate difficult or impractical, environmental liabilities and potential liabilities associated with selling assets, terrorist attacks and wars - God forbid - and other factors that are outside the control of the Fund Manager . There is no guarantee that there will be a ready market for resale of investments, as the investments generally will not be liquid. One of the reasons for the lack of liquidity may be the lack of an existing market for investments, as well as the legal contractual restrictions imposed on reselling them (including any restrictions imposed on the sale of investments by financiers who have provided financing to acquire the related investments).

In addition, negative changes in the operation of any real estate or in the financial position of any tenant may have a negative impact on the rental payments received by the fund, and thus on the fund's ability to provide dividends to investors. Any tenant may be exposed, from time to time, to recession, which may weaken his financial position and lead to his failure to pay rental dues when they are due. At any time, any tenant may seek protection against applicable bankruptcy or insolvency laws, which may lead to the refusal or termination of the lease agreement or any other negative consequences, thus reducing the fund's distributable cash flow. There is no guarantee that the tenants will not file for bankruptcy protection in the future, and if they do that the lease will continue to be valid.

Risks of focusing on the real estate sector: The fund may invest in assets concentrated in specific cities (such as Riyadh, Jeddah, Khobar and Khamis Mushait as in the case of the current investment portfolio), and in specific sectors (such as the commercial real estate sector and / or the office real estate sector and / or the Warehouse sector). In the event that the fund concentrates its investments in certain regions or sectors, this matter may expose the fund to the risk of economic recession, more than if the fund's investment portfolio includes assets distributed over a larger number of sectors and cities. As a result, this recession may have a material negative impact on the financial position of the fund, the results of its operations, its cash flows, and its ability to provide dividends to investors.

Commercial real estate market risks: The fund may acquire commercial real estate assets only, and if the fund relies on the sources of income resulting from them, the fund may become exposed to any recession that occurs in this market. The nature of the commercial real estate market is that it is cyclical and influenced by the economic situation in general. Adverse economic conditions affect the value and liquidity of commercial real estate assets. Likewise, the decline in the performance of commercial real estate markets may have a negative impact on the levels of rent and its returns and the number of vacant properties. As a result, this matter may have a material negative impact on the Fund's work and its financial position.

Risks of relying on rental income: The fund may acquire investments based on the values derived from the revenue expected to be obtained from its tenants. There is no guarantee that the vacant space will be rented out, that the expired rents will be renewed, or that there will be an increase in the rents over time. In the event that one of the tenants suffers a financial crisis, he may become unable to pay the rental dues in a timely manner or to renew his lease contract. Some tenants may occupy large portions of related investments, and therefore, as long as the fund's investments are concentrated in those assets, the financial position of the fund, the results of its operations, its cash flows, and its ability to provide dividends to investors may be negatively affected by any negative circumstances that affect these major tenants.

Risks of Illiquidity of Underlying Assets: Real estate assets are relatively difficult to dispose of and convert into cash. Thus, it may be difficult or impossible for the fund to sell a particular real estate asset at the desired price at any given time. Since the fund's portfolio consists of real estate assets, it may be difficult for the fund to sell its real estate assets (especially in times of market downturn, especially those assets that are classified as large real estate assets). The proposed price may be subject to a large discount, especially if the fund is forced to sell any of its assets. During a short period of time for any reason, including the urgent need for cash to make additional investments. This may lead to a decrease in the value of the units and negatively affect the performance of the fund.

Risks associated with the residential real estate sector: The fund may invest in the residential real estate sector. The performance of investments in the residential real estate sector depends greatly on changes in the levels of supply and demand, which are greatly affected by economic, political and security conditions, regional and local factors, including an increase in the level of competition imposed by other residential real estate. The fund's ability to earn rental income and maintain the real estate's value depends to a large extent on the competitive level of the real estate in the market compared to similar properties. In the event that other properties attract better tenants than those attracted by the fund, this may reduce the net rental income for the fund as a result of lower demand from tenants. This may lead to a decrease in the dividend ratios to unitholders and the value and price of their trading.

Real estate development risks: Although real estate development projects will not constitute a large proportion of the fund's investment portfolio, real estate development activities may be exposed to many risks. The risks related to building and marketing a new real estate project include but are not limited to: (A) Late completion of works. (B) Increasing costs. (C) The inability to secure leases at expected levels of income; (D) Force majeure resulting from factors beyond the control of the fund, which are particularly related to construction and real estate development activities (including weather conditions, negative environmental conditions, and a shortage of building materials in the market), which would impede the completion of real estate development projects. It is noteworthy that starting a new project also carries other risks such as those related to the allocation of land use, occupancy rates, obtaining the required government approvals and permits and bearing development costs in relation to projects that have not been completed. The positive completion of such projects will have a direct and significant impact on the value of the units, and any failure to complete the project may reduce the profits and net asset value of the fund.

Funding Risks: It is possible that financing for the fund will be obtained in order to improve the percentage of returns that the fund reaps, and accordingly, any change in the cost of financing or financing conditions may negatively affect the performance of the fund or lead to the loss of the invested capital. For example, financing may cause random changes in the value of the fund's assets or may expose it to a loss greater than the amount of its investment. Whereas access to finance creates an opportunity to increase returns, but at the same time it carries a high degree of financial risk and may expose the fund and its investments to other factors such as high cost of financing and economic recession. Moreover, the fund's assets are usually mortgaged to the lender of the fund, and that lender can claim the assets as soon as any default occurs (as stipulated in the financing documents) by the Special Purpose entity or by the Fund Manager or The fund itself. In this regard, it is indicated that the fund will acquire all the real estate components of the targeted investment portfolio as part of the process of increasing the total value of the fund's assets without any mortgages. For example, the fund intends to acquire NMC Specialized Al Salam Hospital, which has been mortgaged by the seller in favor of the Saudi Ministry of Finance under the facilities provided by the ministry in favor of the seller, after paying the financing and releasing the mortgage on it, but it is possible that the procedures for releasing the mortgage in favor of the ministry takes a long time to fulfill the conditions and requirements of the ministry before releasing the mortgage, which may affect the fund's acquisition of the aforementioned real estate. In addition, it is noteworthy that the real estate components of the targeted investment portfolio may be mortgaged as part of the process of increasing the total value of the fund's assets after transferring its ownership to the fund, which also exposes it to the financing risks mentioned in this Item. Consequently, returns owed to fund unit holders may be negatively affected in the event that Al-Rajhi Bank claims the pledged assets.

Risks of actions taken by competitors: The fund competes with other real estate owners, operators and developers in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, and some of them may own properties similar to those owned by the fund in the same range in which the properties are located. If the fund's competitors lease residential and / or commercial places similar to the real estate owned by the fund or sell assets similar to these properties owned by the fund at a value less than the fund's valuation of comparable assets, the fund may not succeed in leasing the commercial and residential space at prices or according to appropriate conditions or It might not work out at all. Consequently, the fund may incur additional costs and expenses for the purpose of maintaining the real estate and may incur a loss of potential income as a result of not leasing or exploiting the basic real estate. Accordingly, the expected income of unit holders may be negatively affected.

Risks of providing guarantees when selling an investment: When selling some of its investments, the fund may be required to provide guarantees about the business and financial conditions of the investment, such as those made in connection with the sale of any real estate, and it may be required to guarantee compensation to buyers for those investments to the extent that those guarantees are inaccurate. These arrangements may result in contingent liabilities, which may reduce the returns of unit holders or may eventually be requested to be financed by the Fund. In addition, the documents regulating the fund stipulate that the fund guarantees compensation to the Fund Manager and its subordinates, including its officials, directors, partners, employees, shareholders, members of its board of directors and other agents, for claims, losses, damages and expenses resulting from its activities on behalf of the fund, and these compensation obligations may affect in a way. Material to investor returns.

Risks of not being able to exit from the fund's investments on good and favorable terms: The fund will dispose of its real estate and other assets at the time the Fund Manager deems fit for sale. The Fund's ability to dispose of real estate on good terms depends on factors outside its control, including competition from other sellers and the availability of funding sources for potential buyers. In the event that the fund is not able to dispose of its assets according to appropriate conditions or in a suitable time, its financial position, results of operations, cash flow and its ability to distribute profits to unitholders may be negatively affected.

Risks of tenants being unable to fulfill their contractual obligations: The results of the fund may be negatively affected if there is a large number of tenants unable to fulfill their rental obligations. In addition, if a tenant turns to the protections provided under bankruptcy, insolvency or similar regulations, his lease may be terminated, and this results in a decrease in the cash flow of the fund. In the event of a large number of cases of breach of obligations and / or bankruptcy from tenants, the cash flow of the fund as well as the fund's ability to implement distributions to unitholders may be negatively affected, especially given the absence of guarantees or a warranty that guarantee the performance of tenants' obligations under the lease contracts.

Risks of the possibility of not being able to renew the lease contract or re-rent the rented space at the end of the contract period: The fund will derive most of its income from rental payments made by real estate tenants. Accordingly, the financial position of the fund, the results of operations and cash flow, as well as the fund's ability to implement distributions to investors may all be negatively affected in the event that the fund is not able to immediately re-rent the properties or renew the lease contracts, or if the rental value upon renewal or re-leasing is much lower than the expected. Upon expiry of any lease agreement, there is no guarantee that the contract will be renewed or that an alternative tenant will be found. The terms of any subsequent lease contract may have lower returns to the fund than the current lease agreement. In the event of default on the part of any tenant, the lessor may face delays or restrictions in implementing the rights and significant costs may be incurred to protect the fund's investments. Moreover, the fund's ability to lease the rental space and the rental value it receives are affected not only by the levels of demand on the part of tenants, but also by the number of other properties that compete with the fund's properties in attracting tenants.

Uninsured losses risk: The fund will maintain at its expense a commercial liability insurance, property insurance, and other types of insurance that cover all properties owned and managed by the fund in accordance with the standards of the Sharia Board, with the type and limits that are believed to be sufficient and appropriate in view of the relative risks that apply to the real estate, at an appropriate coverage cost, and prevailing practices in the sector. Appropriate coverage, and current practices in the sector. Some losses resulting from terrorist acts, storms, floods, or seismic accidents - God forbid - may be covered by insurance, only after imposing some restrictions, including large discounts or co-payments and insurance policy restrictions. Therefore, the Fund may incur material losses that exceed the insurance proceeds and may not be able to continue obtaining insurance coverage at commercially reasonable rates. If the fund encounters an uninsured loss or a loss that exceeds its insurance limits in relation to the ownership of one or more real estate, it is likely that the fund will lose the capital invested in the damaged property, as well as the expected future returns from these properties. Certainly, any such loss is likely to negatively affect the position of the financial fund, the results of its operations, the resulting cash flows, and thus the fund's ability to provide dividends to investors.

Real estate valuation risks: In addition to the assessments conducted by two independent evaluators accredited by the Saudi Authority for Accredited Valuers, the Fund Manager will perform internal evaluations in many cases for the fund. The evaluation processes carried out by the Fund Manager will be for the purpose of estimating the value of a real estate only, and it is not an accurate measure of the value that can be obtained when selling that property, as the selling prices of the fund's properties can be determined only by negotiation between the buyer and seller. If the fund decides to liquidate its assets, the realized value may be more than or less than the estimated value of these assets. In periods of economic volatility, when there is greater uncertainty in relation to the value estimates, and less similar transactions in the market against which the value can be measured, the difference increases between the estimated value of a particular real estate asset and the final market value of that asset. Moreover, the relative uncertainty about cash flows in a distressed market could adversely affect the accuracy of real estate value estimates, negotiations between buyer and seller and thus the ultimate returns to unit owners.

Foreign investment risks: The fund may intend to make a number of investments, all of which may be in unstable countries or considered “emerging markets”. The risks of “emerging markets” include the possibility of certain events that have a negative impact on the political or economic level, in addition to the presence of restrictions on currency exchange, the ownership system, the imposition of progressive taxes and localization, restrictions on the freedom of capital transfer and the prevention of borrowing from external sources. Some investments may require obtaining government approvals under the laws of companies, securities, foreign investments and other similar laws. In addition, government restrictions may impede the receipt of any dividends from investments or transfer of ownership with the aim of exiting.

3. Other risk factors:

Legal Status Risks: The fund represents a contractual arrangement between the unitholders and the Fund Manager. This contractual arrangement is governed and supervised by the Capital Market Authority. The fund does not have its own legal or legal personality and therefore the degree of support of any Saudi official or court for this difference between the legal status of the fund and the legal status of the Fund Manager is considered unclear.

Legal, regulatory and tax risks: The information contained in these terms and conditions is based on existing and announced legislation. Legal, tax, zakat and regulatory changes may occur in the Kingdom or elsewhere during the term of the fund, which could have a negative impact on the fund or its investments. The Fund’s ability to resort to legal protection in the event of a dispute may be limited, and it may be necessary to resort to the courts of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia or any courts in other countries where real estate owned in the Fund are under their jurisdiction in order to protect rights. The compulsory enforcement of leases and other contracts through the judicial system in the Kingdom is a long and difficult process with unpredictable results. In addition, government departments and agencies in the Kingdom, for example notaries public, enjoy a great deal of authority and freedom of judgment with regard to the application of existing legislation. Any changes in the existing legislation or the delay of government departments in implementing these legislations may negatively affect the fund. There are currently no taxes imposed on investment funds subject to the Capital Market Authority in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, and the government and local legislative and executive bodies reserve the right to estimate zakat tax on all unitholders.

Tax risks: Investing in the fund involves various tax risks that are currently not clearly known. The fund’s tax payments reduce the cash available for the fund’s operations as well as potential dividends to investors. Taxes incurred by investors will reduce the returns associated with investing in the fund. Prospective investors should consult with their tax advisors about the taxes involved in investing in, owning and selling units.

VAT risks: As of the date of these terms and conditions, investment in the fund is not subject to income tax, withholding tax, capital gains tax, or any other related tax, except that VAT has been applied in the Kingdom as of January 2018. According to the executive regulations of the value-added tax issued recently in the Kingdom, the fund calculates the value-added tax on the income received by the fund as well as on all the expenses of the fund. At the end of each month, tax returns containing the total income and expenses of the fund are deposited with the General Authority for Zakat and Income, and a set-off is made between the tax due on the income received to the fund and the expenses incurred from the fund, and the fund pays or receives the resulting amount as the case may be. In addition, the fund pays the value-added tax on the amounts paid for the acquisition of real estate of the fund, and these paid sums are reflected in the tax returns for the relevant month and are recovered from the General Authority for Zakat and Income and returned to the fund. It is possible that these tax transactions will change in the future according to any amendments to the relevant laws and regulations, which will have an impact on the fund and the amounts paid to the General Authority for Zakat and Income, and thus the income distributed to unitholders.

In light of the foregoing, investors should seek advice regarding the impact of the VAT on their investment in the fund.

Zakat risks: According to the interpretation of the laws and regulations issued by the General Authority for Zakat and Income, the fund may be required to register with the General Authority for Zakat and Income. Whereas, the General Authority for Zakat and Income has not, to date, imposed the supply of Zakat, but made it voluntarily on investment funds subject to the control and supervision of the Capital Market Authority or the investors of these funds, but this does not mean that the General Authority for Zakat and Income will not change its methodology and decide to apply Zakat to funds or investors in these funds in the future or retrospectively; This methodology can also lead to fines for late payment of Zakat. Imposing Zakat on the fund and the fund's rental income (or delay penalties imposed on it) may lead to a decrease in the value of cash available for fund operations and potential distributions to unitholders. In all cases, investors should seek advice regarding their zakat obligations on their investment in the fund in addition to the impact of imposing zakat on the fund on their investment position in general.

Government and municipal approvals risks: The fund may not succeed in achieving its investment objectives if any required municipal accreditation or approval is refused or granted on unacceptable terms. In such a case, the fund may not be able to complete an investment or complete the development of a real estate project.

Saudization risks: The government of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia may stipulate the employment of a high percentage of the Kingdom's citizens in the real estate development sector in the Kingdom. It is unclear at this stage to what extent the fund and its investments will be required to implement Saudization policies. This is because Saudization may require hiring additional employees or providing additional training, and these additional costs may cause operating costs to be higher than what is originally expected, which will be deducted from the net income of the fund and thus the net profits available for distribution to unitholders may decrease.

Risks of litigation with others the real estate in which the fund invests is operating in various sectors such as education and health care. The companies operating these real estates may be exposed to lawsuits and court procedures on an ongoing basis, which may affect the financial performance of these companies and the return to the fund. For example, some companies operating in the health sector may be exposed to lawsuits or judicial procedures as a result of claims against medical errors and the like, so that the expenses of pleading, defending against claims and paying any amounts under any settlements or provisions reduce the company's ability to pay rent payments due to the fund. This affects the value of the fund's assets and the cash available for distribution to unitholders.

Risks of limitation of liability and compensation: These terms and conditions define the circumstances in which the Fund Manager, shareholders, directors, officials, employees and advisors of the fund, and members of the Fund's Board of Directors bear any liability towards the fund. As a result, investors' right to compensation may be limited in comparison to cases where such restrictive conditions are not stipulated. In addition, the terms and conditions stipulate that the fund will indemnify the Fund Manager and its subsidiaries for claims, losses, damages and expenses arising from their actions on behalf of the fund. These compensation obligations could materially affect investors' returns.

Sovereign and Political Risks: The value of the fund and its investments may be negatively affected by political and diplomatic developments, instability, changes in government policies, and other political and economic developments.

Notes

1. Assuming that the rate of profit on the loan is 4% of the annual financing amount. Any future changes in this rate will affect the amount of profit payable by the fund and thus the investor's share of fees and expenses.
2. Management fees are calculated on the total asset value of the fund.
3. In the second year, we assumed the purchase of a new property worth 100 million Saudi Riyal on the basis of a net lease contract financed by obtaining a new loan of 100 million Saudi Riyal. After this acquisition, the total assets of the fund will include the loan amount to 2.5 billion Saudi Riyal, and the total loan amounted to 855.82 million Saudi Riyal.
4. Non-recurring expenses relate to purchasing new assets in the second year.
5. We assumed that from year three onwards to year ten, we would not own any new asset and would maintain the same rate of fees and charges.
6. Currently there are two properties that have multi-tenants and are managed through a property manager. Any unexpected increase in maintenance expenditures in the future may increase the level of the fund's costs and thus the investor's share of fees and expenses. These amounts include electricity, water, security, cleaning and maintenance expenses of the property.

M- The Fund's Assets:

1. Registration of the Fund's Assets Mechanism

Taking into account any financing that the fund obtains, which may include arranging any mortgages (or any concessions by way of foreclosure) that the fund establishes on its real estate assets for the benefit of its financiers, the fund's real estate assets are registered in the name of one (or more) of the custodian's special purpose companies.

2. Valuation of the Fund's Assets

The Fund Manager appoints two (2) independent real estate evaluators accredited by the Saudi Authority for Accredited Valuers for the purpose of assessing the fund's real estate assets. The Fund Manager has the right, at any time, to replace the evaluators with other independent evaluators accredited by the Saudi Authority for Accredited evaluators, and must undertake to change the evaluators every two (2) years maximum. The Fund Manager has the right to change or appoint any new valuers for the fund with the aim of evaluating a specific property without any prior notice to the unitholders. The aforementioned appointment shall be made by the Fund Manager, taking into consideration his fiduciary responsibility towards the unitholders.

(a) Names of accredited evaluators of the fund's assets

The Fund Manager evaluates the fund's assets based on a valuation prepared by two independent evaluators approved by the Saudi Authority for Accredited evaluators. According to the existing arrangements at the date of the fund's listing, the following companies have evaluated the real estate assets of the fund:

- Olaat company
- ValuStrat Company
- Barcode Company
- White Cubes Company
- Knight Frank
- Jones Lang LaSalle (JLL)

(b) How to evaluate each asset owned by the fund

The price of one unit in the fund is calculated by deducting the fund's total liabilities, including any financing obligations, fees and expenses due on the fund during the calculation period, from the fund's total assets. The result is divided by the number of fund units for the same period. This price shall be the indicative price for the fund units.

The value of the fund's total assets shall be the sum of all real estate and cash assets, accumulated profits and other receivables and the market value of all investments in addition to the present value of any other assets owned by the fund. The Fund Manager exercises his reasonable discretion in determining the values that pertain to the fund's assets and liabilities, provided that he acts in good faith in the interest of the fund as a whole. For purposes of determining the net asset value, the Fund Manager calculates the average of the two valuations. As part of the annual audit, the Auditor reviews the valuation of the investments.

*The Fund Manager declares that the initial evaluation was prepared by Olaat Development Company Ltd, and Bussma Real Estate Appraisal Office (upon which the property of Al- Andalus Center was purchased) prior to the appointment of Olaat Development Company Ltd. as a property manager under a property management contract concluded with the Fund Manager.

NMCAI-Salam Speciality Hospital	11,710,000	Jones Lang LaSalle (JLL): Jones Lang LaSalle (JLL) confirms that comparative rental information for hospitals is limited due to its scarcity and the nature of the use of the property as rents represent a percentage of operational performance that is based on the operations of the specialized medical facility and its business model. Research by Jones Lang LaSalle (JLL) of hospitals operating on a stable basis indicates that rents are usually between 5 and 7% of total income. Taking into account the analysis in the report of the Jones Lang LaSalle (JLL) Company for this property and the agreed rental amount, Jones Lang LaSalle believes that the contracted rent is in line with what the market will pay for this property if the property is available for rent in the open market.	White Cubes: Due to the fact that transactions are very limited in the market (buying and selling activities) in addition to several other factors, the income approach cannot be applied using market prices for these properties due to the inability to lease them as separate or split units. For example, any educational or medical facility that is measured by the number of students and the number of beds per unit or per square meter. On the other hand, average price rates for properties similar in characteristics to medical properties were verified, taking into account the number of beds that the property could fit, space, specifications, services, and all other standards for the same characteristics. The White Cube Company believes that the actual rents of these properties do not exceed 35% to 40% of the proceeds expected and very acceptable for such business and in line with the market.
Baraem Rowad Al Khaleej International Schools	1,550,000	Knight Frank: Due to the limited information available regarding deals similar to this type of real estate in the real estate market, it is considered difficult to evaluate these assets using the comparison method. Therefore, the analysis of the general market dynamics in the educational sector, the operational performance and the life cycle of the asset was used to measure the rent that can be paid by each school. As can be seen in this case, the rental coverage coefficient (revenue divided by rent) is more than 2.5 times as soon as schools have a stable number of students. In this case, it means that schools can efficiently cover the rent.	White Cubes: Due to the fact that transactions are very limited in the market (buying and selling activities) in addition to several other factors, the income approach cannot be applied using market prices for these properties due to the inability to lease them as separate or split units.
