4. The main risks of investing in the Fund

Prospective investors should be aware of the risks that their investment in the Fund may be exposed to. Therefore, the Fund is suitable for investors who realize the magnitude of those risks and have the financial capacity, awareness and knowledge that qualifies them to bear a partial or total loss of the investment value. Given the nature of the investment in the Fund and its investment strategies, it appears that investing in the Fund involves a high degree of risk, including but not limited to the risks referred to below.

The Fund Manager cannot give any assurances that the unit holders will achieve profits on their investment in the Fund, but rather that the money invested in the Fund is subject to total or partial profit or loss. Also, the statements on the risks below do not represent a complete explanation of all the risks involved in investing in the Fund. In addition, as the Fund's investment portfolio evolves and changes over time, the investment in the Units may be subject to other risk factors. Accordingly, each prospective investor should study the terms and conditions in full and consult his professional advisors before deciding to apply for participation in the Units.

- A) The investment in the Fund is considered a high-risk investment in view of its investment in the stocks of emerging and new companies with a limited performance record. However, investing in the Fund is safer than direct investment in the stock market, as the Fund's investment manager has the necessary technical and professional capabilities to manage risks and mitigate their impact on returns.
- B) The past performance of the investment Fund, or the index's past performance does not indicate what the Fund's performance will be like in the future.
- C) The Fund does not guarantee to unit holders that the Fund's performance (or its performance compared to the index) will be repeated or similar to past performance in the future.
- D) The investment Fund is not a deposit with any local bank that markets or sells securities or is affiliated with the investment Fund.
- E) Investors in the Fund may be exposed to the risks of partial or total financial losses resulting from their investments in the Fund units.
- F) The elements of risks that may affect the value of the investment in the Fund are as follows, but are not limited to:

1. Disclosure risks:

Disclosure risks relate to the possibility of incorrect data in the IPO prospectus or the omission of material data in it. In view of the Fundamental reliance of the Fund Manager in making the investment decision on the information contained in the prospectus issued by the companies, the risks of making an improper investment decision remain in the event of omission of material data or the presence of incorrect data in the prospectuses of the companies, despite the supervision of the Market Authority Finance on the operations of the initial and professional issues in which the Fund Manager manages its investment operations.

2. Risks of future financial expectations:

Expectations of future financial results for companies and the availability of the necessary factors to achieve and sustain returns in the future are among the important tools on which the Fund Manager builds his investment decisions. However, these expectations may or may not be achieved as expected, which may lead to a deviation in the results of the Fund's operations from expectations. Also, after announcing the company's financial results, the market price of its shares may move in a direction contrary to those expectations, as in the case of a decrease in the profitability of companies whose shares are listed.

3. Risks of slowing down the initial issuances process:

In accordance with the balanced policy pursued by the Capital Market Authority, companies' offering dates are accepted and determined according to a specific schedule that is compatible with the immediate conditions of the initial issues market. Therefore, there may be a slowdown in the initial release process at times. The slowdown may occur as a result of the macroeconomic conditions of the IPO market.

4. Limited performance record:

The Fund is new in concept, has no previous performance record and depends on the experience of the Fund Manager in managing this type of investment. No assurance can be given that the Fund's investment objectives will be achieved.

5. Possible fluctuations in stock markets:

Stock prices in the secondary markets are exposed to sharp fluctuations that may include a sharp and sudden drop, and no guarantee or assurance of the future performance of the securities can be provided, and the past performance records do not reflect what will be achieved in the future. Stock price fluctuations in emerging markets may be greater than what prevails in developed stock markets, which may pose risks to the Fund's investments in the event of a sharp and sudden drop in the market value of the securities.

6. Risks of IPOs:

Shares of public companies are offered publicly through initial offerings in the primary market. Investment in IPOs may involve the risk of limited shares available for subscription during the IPO period. Also, the investor's knowledge of the company issuing the shares may be insufficient or may have a limited performance history, and the companies issuing securities may belong to new economic sectors, and some companies may be in the development stage and do not achieve operating income in the short term, which increases the risks of underwriting in its shares.

7. Risks of investing in medium and small companies:

Investment in the shares of medium and small companies is subject to more risks than other investments, including the possibility that these companies may not achieve the expected profits and high volatility in their performance, in addition to the lack of experience or poor management of these companies, which may lead to fluctuation in their results and fluctuations in their share prices, which may negatively affect the performance of the Fund and the unit price.

8. Late Listing Risks:

It is possible that there may be a delay in listing the shares of a company whose shares were acquired during the initial offering period for a period that may extend to two months or more from the date of the initial offering, and this may lead to the Fund's inability to sell those shares.

9. Risks of Participation in Initial Offerings:

The Fund may encounter difficulties related to its participation in the initial offerings of shares of companies, as there is no guarantee for the Fund of receiving an invitation to participate in the initial public offerings of shares of some companies. Since the Fund receives an invitation, among other companies and Funds, to participate in the available initial offerings, this may limit the Fund's ability to invest in shares of some companies during the initial offering period.

10. Investment Concentration Risks:

The market value of the shares of a particular issuer may be more responsive to market fluctuations than what is happening in the market itself. As a result, if the shares of a particular issuer represent an important part of the market value of the Fund's assets, the change in the market value of the shares of that issuer may result in a fundamental fluctuation in the value of the Fund's units compared to what occurs in normal circumstances. Also, the less diversified Fund may suffer from low liquidity in the event that a substantial part of its assets is invested in the shares of a limited number of issuers. Essentially, the Fund may not be able to liquidate its investment with a particular source easily to meet the redemption requirements of the Fund.

11. Market risk:

Market risk relates to the potential fluctuations that may occur in the stock markets in which the Fund invests. The market value of the shares of new and emerging companies is subject to the ups and downs that may occur in the stock markets, sometimes suddenly and unexpectedly. In these cases, the Fund may be exposed to the risks that result from the sudden reverse movement of the stock markets, which can occur in response to any information related to negative economic returns, or a change in investor behavior, or a consensus of opinion that leads to an exaggerated increase in the market value of the shares.

12. Risks related to Shariah controls:

The application of Shariah controls on the Fund's investments generally limits the scope and number of shares available for investment by the Fund. Also, the companies in which the Fund invests after acquiring its shares may exceed the permissible Shariah standards, which prompts the Fund to dispose of the shares of those companies at times that may be inappropriate. The occurrence of such cases may limit the scope of investment opportunities available to the Fund.

13. Risks of Allocation Results:

According to the system of offering initial public subscriptions for shares, subscription may be limited to specific categories that are allowed to subscribe, and minimum and upper limits may be set for subscription, whether for natural or legal persons. Also, in the event that the subscription is met and the demand for the shares offered for subscription increases, a higher ceiling is set for the number of shares for each subscriber, and then the remaining shares are allocated in a limited number to each subscriber, and this may be accompanied by conditions related to the availability of shares offered for subscription. Such restrictions may limit the Fund's freedom to subscribe to companies' shares during the initial public offering period, which may make the Fund lose some investment opportunities that could increase the Fund's returns.

14. Political risks:

The performance of the Fund may be affected by uncertainties that result from inappropriate political changes that may occur on a country, regional or global scale that may affect the performance of secondary markets and the market value of the securities in which the Fund invests. These risks may also result from economic changes and market conditions, and the uncertainties associated with changes in government policies, or from cases of imposing restrictions on the movement of capital, or changes in laws, regulations and tax requirements, and economic recessions that prevail in different markets.

15. Legal risks:

The requirements of regulations and disclosure standards may be lower in some stock markets arising from them in developed countries. Accordingly, the general information available about a particular company that is an issuer of securities may be limited, and the general information related to the financial results and future expansion plans of the companies may be unclear or accurate. It is also possible to omit material data or presence of incorrect data on the basis of which investment decisions may be taken, which may negatively affect performance.

16. Liquidity Risk:

Liquidity risk means the speed and ease with which assets can be converted into cash without a loss in their market value. The Fund may face the risk of not being able to sell some of its investments due to economic or market conditions. However, the Fund will seek to maintain part of its investments within the framework of the Fund's asset allocation determinants mentioned in paragraph (2) "Main Investment Policies" above, in highly liquid investments in the short term to meet potential recovery requirements.

5. Risk Assessment Mechanism

The Fund Manager acknowledges the existence of an internal mechanism to assess the risks related to the Fund's assets. However, no risk control system is without potential errors or failures, and no assurance can be given that any risk control framework used by the Fund Manager will achieve its objective. The target risk limits set by the Fund Manager may be based on past patterns of returns and correlations of the securities in which the Fund invests. No assurance can be given that past patterns give an accurate prediction about future patterns.

6. The target group for investing in the Fund

The Fund mainly targets investors from individuals, institutions, government entities and others who have a desire to invest in the Saudi Stock Exchange, which gives them the opportunity to participate and indirectly invest in the shares of companies during the initial public offering of their shares, and/or in the shares of new listed companies which has not been five years since its listing in Saudi Stock Exchange (main and parallel-Nomu).

7. Investment Restrictions/Limits

The Fund Manager shall abide by the restrictions that apply to the Fund contained in the Funds Regulations, the Fund's Terms and Conditions, the Fund's Shariah Board controls.

8. Fund currency

The Fund's currency is the Saudi Riyal.
